Here to help those affected by loss

National Federation
Funeral Directors

In an ideal world, the price of a funeral will be a secondary consideration for the bereaved. However, the fact is that current economic pressures, combined with limited market choice and price transparency, means often families feel obliged to pay more than they can comfortably afford - or else run the risk that their loved ones might not receive the standard of farewell they deserve.

In recognition of the purpose and quality of its services and the fact they are completely FREE for members of the public and funeral directors to use, the NFFD has recently secured the services of TV's Dr Hilary Jones as its Official Patron. His aim since 2015 has been to bring increased public awareness to the NFFD's mission which will in-turn help the NFFD and Total Trust Funeral Plans ensure that consumers receive the best possible deal every time.

Dr Hilary said: "As a GP, death and dealing with bereaved families is a regular part of my work - so supporting the NFFD's cause to improve the industry and make the grieving process easier, is something I'm only too happy to do. Although price-rises are inevitable in every area of commerce, I fully support the NFFD's conviction that increasing costs within the funeral industry must be proportionate, justifiable, essential, and within reach of those on a limited budget. I also believe, as the NFFD does, that families can also help themselves by planning ahead for life's only inevitable expense.

Whilst there will always be a demand for the traditional and trusted 'family' funeral director, the NFFD also recognises that increased competition and transparency is vital to creating and maintaining a healthier balance between the price customers pay, and the quality and value for money of the services they receive.

The NFFD provides a host of services all aimed at helping ambitious, conscientious, forward-thinking funeral directors to be more competitive, whilst at the same time, improving the entire experience of those affected by loss."

The constant rise of Funerals

At Sun Life they say at present, the average price for a funeral is £3897 across the UK. Some areas being more expensive than others. Funerals are going up by about 5% per annum.

They also say that funeral costs have doubled in price over the last decade.

Here is a small scale graph to show you their predictions.

So if you take out a plan today, the price is fixed at today's prices and will cover all the funeral directors fees.

Townsend Moore Funeral Services

was formed with the main intention of reducing the cost of funerals and funeral plans dramatically, which have been pushed up in recent years for no apparent reason. We are Funeral Directors, unlike most funeral plan providers, who are investment companies.

Not only do we supply reasonably priced funerals, with complete compassion and dignity, we believe our personalised professional service is second to none. Taking the deceased's family through every stage with complete respect and patience.

Please see our testimonials and letters of satisfaction on our website.

We are also members of the NFFD - National Federation of Funeral Directors. Doctor Hilary Jones is an Ambassador and Patron for NFFD.

Direct Cremation Funeral Plan

Here at Townsend Moore, we understand that not everyone wants an extravagant or all-inclusive funeral. To many, when life's course is run, there seems little sense in spending heavily on what will be their final journey.

In response to this, Townsend Moore is unique in that we also offer a very simple funeral plan that includes all the essential aspects of a cremation, but without any additional elements.

DIRECT PLAN

- DC Collection of the deceased
- DC Care of the deceased
- DC Basic coffin (crematorium approved)
- DC Transport of the deceased to the crematorium
- DC Cremation fees
- DC Doctor's Fees

The Direct Cremation plan does not include a service, flowers, cortege, or any other extraneous elements. We will notify the relatives and friends of the time and date of the cremation, but there will be no service or provision for mourners to attend.

This plan cannot be tailored, modified, or added to at any time.

Do you require a Burial Plan?

We can help in all aspects

The price of a burial plot can change dramatically, depending on the church or local authority and availability etc., plus the cost of an interment fee and grave digger needs to be considered.

Don't worry, we will take the worry away from you. You may already have a plot already purchased. In either case, call:
